Welcome!

Hello and welcome to “Nocturnal”! We know that there are so many wonderful arts events happening across Austin, so we’re honored that you chose to spend your time here with us to explore the many moods of nighttime.

Music about nighttime is often calm and peaceful, celebrating the winding down of day. But nighttime isn’t just for sleeping! It also provides the impetus and the backdrop for some of our most profoundly human behaviors: letting loose, exploring our passions, deep reflection, predatorial impulses, and fear instincts, to name a few. Let’s delve into all things nocturnal.

We’re so excited to premiere two brand new works by Austin composer Graham Yates tonight: Walker, There is No Road and A Fluted Shell. We commissioned these pieces to serve as companions for a work that Graham wrote in 2021 called Drinking Alone Under the Moon, which I was lucky enough to sing with Inversion Ensemble. It’s been swimming around in my head for four years now, needing friends. We have loved working with Graham and bringing these new pieces to life!

We’re also always thankful to get to work with pianist Benjie Dia who is performing two gorgeous solos tonight, including one of my all-time favorite piano pieces, Ottorino Respighi’s Notturmo, which happened to serve as the inspiration for the theme of this concert.

Thank you again for being here and for getting Nocturnal with us.
